Inheriting a tradition and innovating for modern times

Born into a family with a long and distinguished history, 8th generation Eguchi Sozan continues the lineage of the Eguchi family, and the Taikousannomaru Kiln, from Japan's Edo period.

He fires his noborigama 3 times a year, and notes that firing with wood gives him color changes and effects in the kiln that make his work enjoyable for him. His work has won him many awards, including prizes from the Kyushu Shinkougeiten and the Saga Bijutsukyokaiten.

"My next big challenge will be large platters.", says Eguchi san. Continuing the tradition of rustic Karatsu ware started by his ancestors, Eguchi san strives to keep moving forward, challenging himself with new work.
