- ▶ Born in Toyama.
- ▶ Apprenticed with Chihiro Ishida for 3 years, and Fujinoki Dohei for 3 years, before opening own studio and kiln.

Walking hand in hand with nature

Fascinated by the rustic clay and quiet atmosphere of Yi Period ceramic ware, Fukawa san got her start in the world of pottery. During her apprenticeship with Fujinoki Dohei, her values regarding Karatsu ware changed dramatically. "I want to commune with nature, and express it through clay," she says. This is the point of origin for her work. The style of the work is natural, and she places great importance on trusting her feelings and intuition. Fukawa san wants people to get a sense of his life through his expressions in clay. She wants them to feel the fullness of coexisting with nature.

"It's about walking hand in hand with nature, unencumbered by anything else." Fukawa san's gentle demeanor comes through in the rustic atmosphere of her pottery.
